ULISIS OMAR ISLAS-MACIAS, AKA “CLON,” and [REDACTED]
[REDACTED], were members and/or associates of La Linea all of whom engaged and conspired in one or more of the criminal activities of the cartel described herein.

2. La Linea, historically also known as the Juarez Cartel, maintained an especially strong presence in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, and the Western District of Texas to include essential control of the Ojinaga, Chihuahua, Mexico plaza. A “plaza” in criminal cartel terms is a geographic area, often times adjacent to the border with the United States, that is controlled by a particular criminal enterprise, in this case, La Linea. The town Ojinaga lies on the border with the United States directly across from Presidio, Texas which is in the Western District of Texas.

3. The La Linea plaza boss for Ojinaga during the majority of the time period covered by this indictment was (1) SERGIO MENCHACA PIZARRO, AKA “MENCHACA, JR.” AKA “EL MENCHACA,” AKA “EL ROBIN.” [REDACTED]

██████████ also played a top managerial and organizer role during the time period covered by this indictment.

4. La Linea in Ojinaga maintained a network of criminal conspirators within Mexico who grew, harvested, purchased, processed, packaged, stored, transported, sold, and distributed large quantities of marijuana which was ultimately imported and distributed into the United States at various locations, to include locations within the Western District of Texas. By controlling the Ojinaga plaza, other organizations would at times pay a fee or “piso” to La Linea in order to bring their marijuana through the Ojinaga plaza.

5. La Linea in Ojinaga maintained and worked with a network of criminal conspirators in smuggling undocumented aliens to the United States. By controlling the Ojinaga plaza, other organizations would at times pay a fee or “piso” to La Linea in order to bring through undocumented aliens on their way to the United States.

6. La Linea maintained a network of criminal conspirators who would illegally export from the United States and transport weapons and ammunition needed to establish and maintain the Cartel’s drug trafficking and human smuggling activities.

7. La Linea maintained a number of armed security forces, otherwise known as “sicarios,” whose duties were to enforce the orders of the cartel leadership which helped to ensure control of the plaza for La Linea thus allowing the organization to continue its criminal activities including drug trafficking and human smuggling. These “sicarios” would use firearms for these purposes.
